

REGISTER OF DEEDS BACKGROUND

The Register of Deeds Office was established in Wisconsin in 1836. The 1848 Wisconsin constitution established the Register of Deeds as a permanent element of the county-level government structure.

The Register of Deeds files, records and issues copies of instruments and document of significance to both the community as a whole and to its individual citizens. Vital records document the span of our lives from birth to death. The office also maintains land records documenting title to over $613.1 billion in real property in Wisconsin.*

During the past 150+ years the Register of Deeds office has utilized advanced technology to handle the increasing work load. From quill pens to computerized indexes to internet - accessible documents to electronic filing, these advancements have allowed us to provide a higher level of service to our customers during tough budget constraints.

*eRecording of Documents

Later that year the Milwaukee County Register of Deeds began recording documents electronically. More counties soon followed, making Wisconsin a leader in the number of counties that are able to accept documents electronically.

ELECTED VS. APPOINTED

Public service is a key responsibility of county-wide officials. The electoral process brings forth individuals interested in public service. Voters deserve the right to choose who will provide the most effective and responsive public service. Elimination of the electoral process diminishes the voice of the people.

County-wide elected officials are accountable to their constituents, while an appointed department head is accountable only to the person or committee who appointed them. This separation of power removes the opportunity for undue influence by the county executive, administrative staff, and county board supervisors in their performance of their duties, and maintains the integrity of their offices.

Allowing county boards, especially where there are county executives, to appoint individuals to these public service positions could lead to a patronage system that is contrary to Wisconsin good government practices.

County-wide elected officials are more responsive to the administrative needs of the taxpayer and are in a better position to maintain the checks and balances needed in county government.

County-wide elected officials deal with people's records and monies, which affects their lives in almost every aspect. Since county elected officials are the guardians of the public's records and monies, they ought to answer directly to the people whose records they protect.
